On the Epistle to the Galatians

“Paul might have permitted Titus to be circumcised; but when he saw that they wanted to compel him, Paul refused. For if those who were demanding circumcision had had their way, they would have jumped to the conclusion that circumcision was necessary for righteousness; and thus, because of Paul's permission, they would have prevailed against him. . . .

“Therefore Paul achieved a glorious victory. Although Titus, the Gentile, was in the midst of the Apostles and of all the faithful, where this question was being vehemently debated, he was not compelled to undergo circumcision. Paul obtained this triumph; and he declares that this conference decided, by the consensus of all the Apostles and with the approval of the entire church, that Titus was not to be circumcised. This is a powerful argument, one that is very effective against the false apostles. With the argument that ‘even Titus was not compelled to be circumcised’ Paul succeeded in refuting and convincing all his opponents. It is as though he were to say: ‘Why do these false apostles spread the false rumor about me that I was obligated, at the behest of the Apostles, to observe circumcision? For I have the testimony of the faithful in Jerusalem, indeed of the Apostles themselves, that as a result of my efforts the very opposite was decided on. Not only did my position win out there — that Titus was to remain uncircumcised — but the Apostles approved and ratified it. Therefore your false apostles are liars; they use the name of the Apostles to slander me and to trick you. For I, and not they, have the Apostles and all the faithful on my side, and I can prove this from the case of Titus.’

“At the same time Paul did not condemn circumcision; nor did he compel anyone to undergo it. For it is neither sin nor righteousness to be either uncircumcised or circumcised, just as it is neither sin nor righteousness, but a physical necessity, to eat and drink.

“Whether you eat or not, you are neither better nor worse off (1 Cor. 8:8). But if anyone came along and attached either sin or righteousness to it and said: ‘If you eat, you are sinning; but if you abstain, you are righteous,’ or vice versa, he would be both foolish and evil. This is what the pope does; in his formula of excommunication he threatens with punishment the soul of anyone who does not obey the laws of the Roman pontiff, and he makes all his laws necessary for salvation. Therefore it is the devil himself who is speaking in the person of the pope and in all such papal decrees. For if salvation consists in the observance of the pope’s laws, what need do we have of Christ as our Justifier and Savior?

“But because of false brethren secretly brought in, who slipped in to spy out our freedom which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage — to them we did not yield submission even for a moment, that the truth of the Gospel might be preserved for you’ (Gal. 2:4–5). Here Paul states why he went up to Jerusalem and conferred with the other Apostles about his Gospel; he also states why he did not circumcise Titus. It was not to be confirmed by the Apostles or to become more certain of his Gospel, for he had no doubts about this. It was rather that the truth of the Gospel might abide among the Galatians and in all the churches of the Gentiles. Thus you see that what was at stake for Paul was no joke and no trifle.

“Now when Paul speaks of ‘the truth of the Gospel,’ he shows that there are two uses of the Gospel, a true one and a false one, or a true and a false gospel. It is as though he were saying: ‘The false apostles proclaim a faith and a gospel too, but their gospel is a false gospel. Hence my stubbornness and refusal to yield. I did this in order that the truth of the Gospel might be preserved among you.’ Thus in our day the pope and the sectarians brag that they proclaim the Gospel and faith in Christ. Yes, they do, but with the same results that the false apostles once had, those whom Paul (Gal. 1:7) calls troublers of the churches and perverters of the Gospel of Christ. By contrast he says that he is teaching ‘the truth of the Gospel,’ the pure and true Gospel, as though he were saying: ‘Everything else is a lie masquerading as the Gospel.’ For all the heretics lay claim to the names of God, of Christ, of the church, etc.; and they pretend that they want to teach, not errors but the most certain truth and the purest Gospel.

“The truth of the Gospel is this, that our righteousness comes by faith alone, without the works of the Law. The falsification or corruption of the Gospel is this, that we are justified by faith but not without the works of the Law. The false apostles preached the Gospel, but they did so with this condition attached to it. The scholastics do the same thing in our day. . . .”
